

Feeding your rabbit or guinea pig

Rabbits and guinea pigs commonly suffer from dental disease and digestive problems due to poor diet. Most pet shop diets consist of multiple grain types which allow your pet to be very selective with its feeding. They tend to prefer the more energy dense parts of the diet which upset their digestion and are deficient in calcium. In truth they should eat mostly hay, but with very small amounts of concentrate food.

We advise provision of ad lib hay or grass and limited quantities of Supa rabbit or Supa Guinea. Guinea pigs require high levels of Vitamin C so if feeding both rabbits and guinea pigs together they are better off with the Supa Guinea to share.
