

Microchipping

We advise that you have your pet microchipped to permanently identify him or her as yours. This is simply an injection in the scruff of the neck and can be performed at the same time as vaccinations, neutering or within nurse clinics. Once inserted your details are sent to the registration agency which stores them for the life of your pet. You will receive confirmation of this registration direct from the agency.

All vets, the RSPCA and dog wardens have scanners which allow your pet to be identified. They will then get your details and contact you allowing prompt return of your pet. Please ensure that you update the registration agency of any change in your contact details as we cannot change registered details ourselves.

This is a requirement for identification for the pet passport scheme should you wish to holiday abroad with your pet.
